PRINT & FILL · ONE ANIMAL PER SHEET

Pet Profile Sheet

The one-page dossier: what they look like, what they love, what their vet needs to know.

tape a photo here — one where the face and the collar both show

PET'S NAME

SPECIES

BREED / MIX

BIRTHDAY OR "ROUGHLY"

COLOUR & MARKS

WEIGHT & THE DATE IT WAS TAKEN

The heart of things

Loves…

Worries about…

Quirks we've accepted

Daily rhythm

Meals, treats & water habits

Walks, play, litter & yard time

Health basics

Vet clinic & phone

Microchip & tag details

Allergies & regular meds

Grooming, baths, trimmings

If something's wrong tonight

Who to call, in order:

our regular vet clinic

after-hours / emergency clinic

the backup human who has met this animal

HOW TO USE IT

How to Use · Pet Profile Sheet

One sheet per animal, kept where the food comes from.

What this sheet builds

A dossier the whole family can read in one glance — and that a stranger, a sitter or an emergency clinic could use if you’re not around. The photo matters more than perfect handwriting: faces get animals found and remembered.

Sixty-second setup

1. Tape in a photo, then fill the top row from memory — nobody’s checking your spelling of the breed.
2. Copy the vet line straight off your last clinic receipt, and the chip line off the adoption or purchase papers.
3. Leave what you don’t know blank. Blanks get fixed on the next vet visit; guesses never do.

Keep it true

- Weights and meds drift: re-copy the sheet whenever the collar feels loose, or with the seasons.
- Old copies stay in the folder — a stack of honest old pages beats one polished page of stale facts.
- Teens and tweens can own a section: quirks and loves are theirs to write, and they notice everything.

More than one animal?

One sheet each, newest on top. The “worries” box is the hidden gem: writing down what startles each animal makes thunder seasons and vet days dramatically calmer.